

Courts Seek Input for Potential Cost Savings

The Judicial Branch has launched a website and is asking the public for their input on how the courts can save money in these tight budget times. When the Courts' announced this webpage, they stated that they welcome "ideas for innovations and reforms that would improve the administration of justice within the constraints of lower budgets."

If you go the Courts' home page, www.iowacourts.gov, you can access a wide variety of financial information including their budget overview and case workload, as well as submit your money saving ideas.
